Editorials Addressing a grievance

On April 16, Gary Wigger of Granite City took advantage of his right as an American citizen to petition the government concening greevant. Wigger went before the District 9 School Board to ask that Vladimir K. Milosevic, a Yugoslavian-exchange student staying with the Wigger family, be allowed to graduate from high school.

Wigger did not come to the board denyading anything He did not threaten to unseat the board 'n future elections. Before making his presentation, Wigger apologized for the need to name specific school officials and stressed it was their official and not personal actions he was questioning. Wigger went on to make a well-researched and well-thought-out presentation that gave the board a clear view of a very out presentation that gave the board a clear view of a very complicated issue and then gave the board a number of complicated issue and then gave the board a number of options to consider.

Wigger wanted Milosevic to graduate. If he couldn't graduate, however, Wigger asked that Milosevic at least be allowed to participate in the ceremony. If he couldn't participate in the ceremony. If he couldn't participate in the ceremony wigger asked that at least the board consider establishing a written policy so there would be no problems concerning future exchange students.

School Superintendent Gib Walmsley, whose argument was that the only people who ever crossed the stage at Granite City's graduation were those who had earned the right, found Wigger a worthy opponent. As Wigger's presentation and even used Wigger as an example that Granite City High School graduates "have done more than attend school for four years."

School graduates have too the four years."

Milosevic won't be allowed to graduate but he will be allowed limited participation in the ceremony. A policy concerning future exchange students will be established. The school board, faced with some hysterical presentations in the past, usually has listened politely and, without comment, gone on to the next item on the agenda. This time was different.

different.
Wigger, by his personal industry and integrity, has given reason for renewed faith in a system that depends on its public schools to produce solid citizens.

Illini, a gas pipeline company that is leasing the bridge from the City of Madison, has blocked each end of the span with a large chain-link fence topped with barbed wire and razor wire New "no trespassing" signs are in place.

You'll recoall the tragic circumstances that led to the apparent deaths of two young St. Louis sisters, who were believed thrown from the bridge April 5. At the time, we said the easy access to the bridge was to blame.

Illini's reaction was swift. Within two weeks of the tragedy, the barricades were in place, and the company pledged to keep an eye on further invaders.

This deserves praise.

Dogs need to be reined in

The Granite City area, it seems, has become somewhat of a haven for roaming dogs in the last couple of years, and the proof of that reality has to be the tale of Zachary Judkins. The 4-year-old Madison boy is undergoing rabies treatment after being severely bitten by a dog 21, weeks ago. City and community leaders, friends, family, neighbors — just about everybody — combed the streets, alleys and backyards for miles looking for the dog, to no avail. The effort left many with a good feeling for the way the community pitched in. On the other hand, we are deeply disturbed by incidents we continue to see happen with roaming animals. City officials can do only so much to rein them in. If owners aren't willing to see that their animals are accounted for, well kept and not a hazard to others, they don't deserve to have them.

The judge can't correct mistake

I am writing in defense of the judges I have dealt with in the Granite City court system in regard to landlord/tenant dis-putes.

Our court system at times seems to be solely for the tenant, but landlords have to understand that the judge can only follow the laws.

We have the responsibility to learn and abide by these laws in dealing with bad tenants.

Most of the habitually abusive tenants are street smart; they know how to use their rights to take advantage of the court system.

Every time I have been to court I have learned something the would help me the next that would help me the next that we have an attorney represent them; we must learn to handle these matters ourselves.

I feel that one of the problems landlords have to deal with is policing the problems of the problem

If your most important con-cern as a landlord is to rent your unit, and if you are not concerned about the type of peo-ple you are accepting, you can't expect the judge to correct your mistakes.

The interrogation scenes allow director Alan Rudolph to tell the story dramatically and, at the same time, efficiently, which is an important factor for this low-budget beauty. The average Hollywoof film of this type generally has a budget all Thoughts' costmuch less than $10 million.

The film is somewhat confusing for less-than-attentive audiences because of its weaving plottines. But the talented ensemble cast works together sucely and Rudolph's well-paced editing pulls it all together.
